Today we are talking about where our choices come from when we start to create our actual campaign.

Constraint 1: Rules

- o Important to understand what the rules limit us to.
- o Some things are possible, others are not.
- o D&D = dragons, not Apache attacks helicopters.
- o Bounty Hunter = Sci-fi bounties, not pixies on bluebells.

Constraint 2: Outcomes

- What happens when PCs do things, response times, ramifications, laws, the world space.
- We know the world space, so we know what should happen within that space.
- Use your world space that you have created what have you established for yourself in that world and apply that to your campaign idea.

Constraint 3: NPCs

- o These will be making the plans of the campaign, not us.
- So, who are these NPCs?
- The NPCs are the ones reacting within the world space. So, your NPCs need to be solid.

• Constraint 4: Consequences

- We must consider that there will be HIDDEN consequences and outcomes that we CANNOT know.
- The campaign should adapt and change as a result of the things that the PCs are doing.
- NPCs come up with plans GMs merely supervise them, consult with the NPCs, and make sure things happen.

- Coincidence you are the ONLY one who can make this happen.
  - o You MUST make this happen.
  - o Coincidence is something that story relies on.
